

What is continuing professional development?

Continuing professional development (CPD) ensures your knowledge remains relevant and current in today's competitive market. It is also integral to maintaining professional standards and is a fundamental part of your CPA Australia membership. CPD increases your knowledge, skills and your ability to do your job. When you renew your membership each year, you declare to comply with the CPA constitution, By-Laws and continuing professional development obligations.

For your CPD obligations, you need to demonstrate:

- a minimum of 20 hours of CPD activities per year
- a total of 120 hours for a three year time period (triennium).

Hours cannot be carried forward to a new three year period.

Each year members are randomly selected for a review. It is important to keep an up-to-date record of your CPD activities because if you are selected, you may be asked to show this record.
