Abstract

This year marks the 70th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic of China and the 20th anniversary of the return of Macao to China. It is also the 100th anniversary of the May Fourth Movement. From 1919 to the present, China's social outlook has undergone a tremendous transformation. China has finally emerged from a weak and turbulent nation. In terms of ideology and culture, it also returned from the disdain of Confucianism to the inheritance and tolerance of traditional culture. Now, on the one hand, it emphasizes the scientific development, democracy and the rule of law; on the other hand, it stresses the development of national morality, sports, and fine arts. These two aspects have changed fundamentally. Among them, the nature and status of traditional classics have produced subtle changes. It plays a major role in the modernization of Chinese culture and deserves our careful investigation.
