

Department of Sociology
University of Macau
Faculty of Social Sciences and Humanities

Seminar

International Surveys on Victimization and Self-reported Delinquency as Tools to Understand
Cross-national Differences

by

Prof. Christoph Martin Killias

*Full Professor in the Law Faculty of University of Zurich, Switzerland Founding President of the European Society of Criminology
Judge at the Cour de droit pénal (Federal Supreme Court of Switzerland)*

Abstract

International surveys on victimisation, such as the ICVS, have greatly advanced the understanding of factors that influence the level of crime in a given country. The international self-reported delinquency project (ISRD) is equally relevant in this respect. Both datasets suggests that crime varies, across space and time, largely along changing situational factors, such as the availability of consumer goods, and life-styles, such as going out and consuming alcohol or other substances. The potential of several strategies of crime prevention will be discussed in the light of these findings.

29th September, 2010 (Wednesday)

17:00 – 18:30

L205A

Language in English

ALL ARE WELCOME