“Mafias on the Move: How organized crime conquers new territories”

by

Prof. Federico Varese

Professor of Criminology, University of Oxford, U.K.

Abstract

In this talk, Professor Varese will present work that he has conducted during the past ten years on the factors that facilitate mafias' transplantation to new territories. It will present the key concepts, the theories and the methods he has used to research organized crime, as well as selected empirical results. Methods presented include matched comparisons, quantitative content analysis, correspondence analysis and social network analysis. The case studies discussed are the movements of Italian, Russian and Hong Kong-based mafias. The talk will conclude with policy recommendations.
